Effective strategies for using humour in the classroom

The joking culture of small groups influences group processes by smoothing group interaction, forming a collective identity, separating the group from others, and securing appropriate behaviour. Every interacting social group develops, over time, a joking culture: a set of humorous references that are known to members of the group to which members can refer and that serve as the basis of further interaction. In this way, humour becomes a means of attenuated or covert criticism, a flexible device for reconciling criticism with solidarity.

Practice Verbal and Nonverbal Playfulness

Humour will not necessarily cause learning, but there is empirical evidence to support the idea that humour creates conditions conducive to learning."

How?

- *Increases attention, motivation, excitement
- *Increases interactions between students & peers
- *Increases interactions between students & teacher
- *May draw out some of the "invisible" students
- *Reduces anxiety & stress
- *Humanizes" the instructor
- *Use facial animation smile, make lively expressions, and let your eyes sparkle
- *Use comfortable body language and a relaxed voice. Make sure your nonverbal messages match your verbal messages.

Famous saying by a few famous personalities:

"We concluded that humour not only increases interest but also promotes learning." (Narula, et al)

"Humorous material tends to be recalled at higher rates than non-humorous material." (Carlson) "This is because humour acts as a tonic in reducing anxiety and resolving conflict." (Lin, Yeh, and Lo) "Because humour can evoke a positive emotional response, humorous materials could receive not only verbal elaboration but also some appraisal processing, which could boost subsequent memory." (Takahashi and Inoue 81)

And also laughing increases life expectancy So, let's all stand and do our best for the Futuristic blooming buds.
