Teacher Talk

"Life comes from the earth and life returns to the earth". With this tiny entitled quote, life is just lived once and has to be cherished with every single moment may it be contentment or despondency. JUST LIVE IT the way... or not?? I looked deep into the mirror staring at my own eyes with the same question!!! End of the Day, when push comes to shove, I'm a Rider I got to accept the New Challenges in my life!!!

It was just a jiffy, I tapped my shoulders from my suboptimal experience in the newfangled world of me, where my past questioned tonnes, to rather choose this or not. I would say out loud that it's fair that second. Nonetheless, it had brought me so much of learning in authenticity.

Maybe because I was brought up in a very thoughtful and reciprocated family I had to abide by all. I chose pains but it turned me out to link things with my learnings day by day. It was like Learn! Learn!! Learn!!! Still am proud enough to say that am Learning but not a learned!!! This attitude of mine was instilled by my Facilitators when I was young which stands out still!!!! Whoa!!! It just knocks like a ding-dong bell very often. Hats off to my dear Facilitators and my Parents.

Moving on!!! Could be just a phrase but it means a lot when it comes to life -Means to say that not just in your personal life but in your professional life as well. Get into trouble, make mistakes, learn, relearn, unlearn learn again –repeat!!! This taught more than theoretical knowledge. Your third nerve might say why do you have to Switch Over? But then my fourth nerve stamped my third and said let her learn this through her passion and prove that all humans have equal nerves and minds to perform the best in all their endeavors.

Maybe that's how I earned all my degrees with a University rank, still pursuing to reach the Zenith, still learning to compete and have a healthy competition and competitors. Here I switched my gear to the fourth!!! It's all at its PACE and UNDER CONTROL!!! Meant the GEAR of my life...

Facilitator (CAIE) - English

Parent Talk

The learners of today are the leaders of tomorrow.

We are happy to share our experience with TGWS. We are parents of S. Chezhiyan Grade 1 and S. Madhiyazhini Grade 2. Both the kids have studied in Australian schools for the past three years, and TGWS is their first Indian school. We are satisfied with the infrastructure and facilities provided by the TGWS management. It's outstanding in our native district. Coming to teaching, both academic and co-curricular activities are like an all-in-one place of package. All the sports activities, dance, music, art, and studies are boosting the kids' talents to the next level. The LSA is awesome which enhances the kids thinking power and also improves their presentation skills. Since the teachers are friendly and caring, it has made our kids adapt well to the new educational environment. The availability of teachers via text or call after school hours helps the new parents to clear doubts regarding school activities. Sharing weekly reports to parents, gives us an update on current learning at the school. The transport facility at TGWS is very secure and thanks to their prior information of bus timings on special working days. On the whole TGWS is a centralization of curricular, co-curricular, and extra-curricular activities, which exhibits fun learning. We are glad to be a part of the TGWS team. I wish all the students to achieve their ambition and become successful.

Thank you management and staff for taking care of our kids.

Nithya Sakthikumar
P/O Madhiyazhini & Chezhiyan.

THE FLIGHT OF THE FREE BIRD

Once upon a time, in a quaint little village, there lived a young girl named Maya. She had always dreamt of flying high like a bird, exploring the world beyond the village boundaries. But Maya was bound by the strict rules of her conservative community, where dreams were often stifled, and adventures deemed too risky. Despite the limitations imposed upon her, Maya's spirit yearned for freedom. She spent her days gazing at the vast open sky, imagining herself soaring among the clouds, feeling the wind beneath her wings. One day, while she was tending to the village gardens, she noticed a colourful bird with magnificent wings fluttering near her. Its eyes sparkled with a sense of liberation that she had only dreamt of.

Curiosity and envy filled her heart as she watched the bird gracefully manoeuvre through the air. Suddenly, an idea sparked in her mind - what if she could just be as free as the bird?

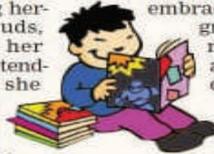

Determined to experience the freedom she craved; Maya began to secretly practice her own version of flying. Every night, after the villagers retired to their homes, she would climb to the tallest tree and spread her arms wide like wings. With each leap, she would pretend to take flight, embracing the essence of freedom that she had. As the days passed, Maya's persistence paid off. She became more agile and confident, honing her "flying" skills under the moonlit sky. One night, as she was engrossed in her imaginary flight, a gentle voice called out from the shadows. Startled, she turned to find her wise grandmother, Leena, watching her with a knowing smile.

"My dear Maya, do not be afraid," Leena said, her eyes full of understanding. "I've been observing your nocturnal adventures. Your spirit is destined for something greater than the confines of this village. Embrace your dreams and embrace your freedom." With her grandmother by her side, Maya mustered the courage to take a leap, just like she had been doing in the tree.

As she soared through the air, Maya felt a sense of euphoria, a thrill she had never known before. The village that once seemed like her entire world now appeared so small beneath her. She was the free bird she had always dreamt of becoming. Maya's flight of freedom became a timeless tale, passed down through generations, reminding people that in the pursuit of freedom, one must find the courage to break free from the chains that hold them back and spread their wings to explore the vast expanse of life beyond. For it is in the embrace of freedom that one truly discovers the essence of their soul and the beauty of the world around them.
